I'm trying to get a little familiar with Swift3, which is not a native language to my day-to-day job. I wanted to try some simple real-world tutorials, so I started with a NSObject subclass. I wrote a simple class to subclass NSObject:

class Person: NSObject { var name: String = "" override init() { } var name = "" func setName(_ name:String) { self.name = name } func setName(_ name:String){ self.name= name } }

 The error I get when I run the above code is: fatal error: Unexpectedly found nil while unwrapping an Optional value I'm wondering what I'm doing wrong. I want my variables to be set in the init(), rather than the one that's generated by Swift for me. I know I'm probably doing something stupid, but what? A: Remove override keyword because it
